Youth in Technology Incubator is a new program that uses technology, arts and media to promote your stories, message, creativity and skills.

You'll see future camps featuring social media influencers, artists, filmmakers, and more!

Skill development will include artistic style, social media marketing, website design, storytelling, writing, and more.

Ultimately, YTI is all about giving you skills to develop your voice and be an advocate for yourself & your community.

We want to help you shape your ideas, tell your story and be community advocates.

COUNTY OF SANTA CLARA
Behavioral Health Services

CreaTV San Jose

CreaTV serves youth and adults in San Jose and Silicon Valley, with special focus on low-income communities of color, and underrepresented communities, including at-risk youth and LGBTQ+ adults.

Each participant will have access to our professional community media team and resources.

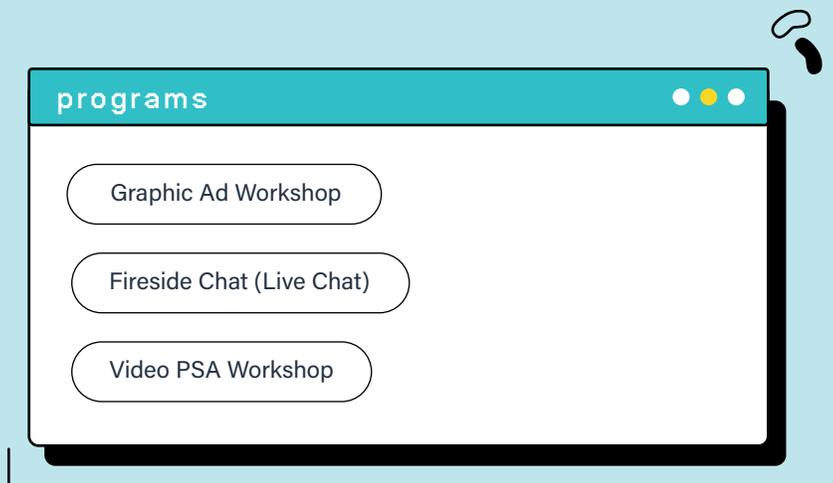

This will include the production equipment, technical training, and mentoring needed to develop artistic and media making skills so they might bring the spirit of innovation and empowerment home to their communities.

Breaking Sky

As the founder and creative mind behind Breaking Sky Productions, Howard has always believed in having a strong work ethic and that it was important to earn the things you love.

Over the last decade, Howard has produced many works in the fields of documentaries, promotional videos, short films, and much more. Like his craft, Howard also puts in the same kind of thought and careful planning into the team he works with to ensure quality and a positive experience.

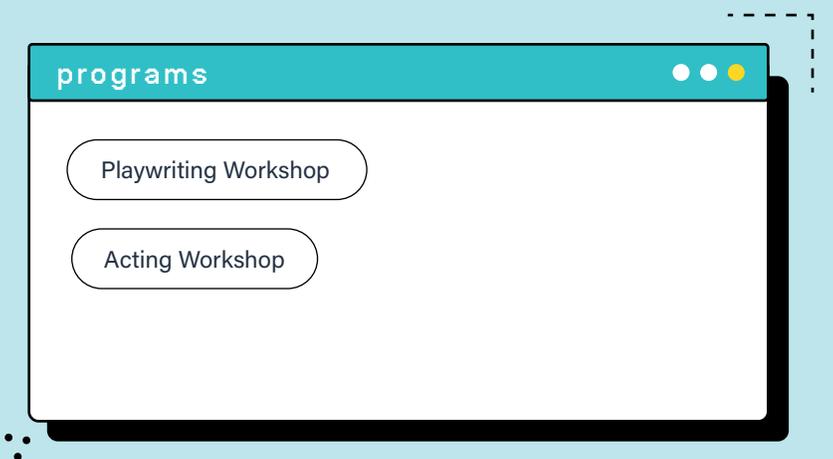

More Más Marami

More Más Marami Arts started with the realization that all they needed to create theatre was the desire and the community to do so.

Formed in 2019, they are a collective of artists united by their faith in the power of theatre to bring people together.

They produce innovative productions, script readings, open mics, educational workshops, and opportunities for and with underserved communities of San Jose and the South Bay Area.

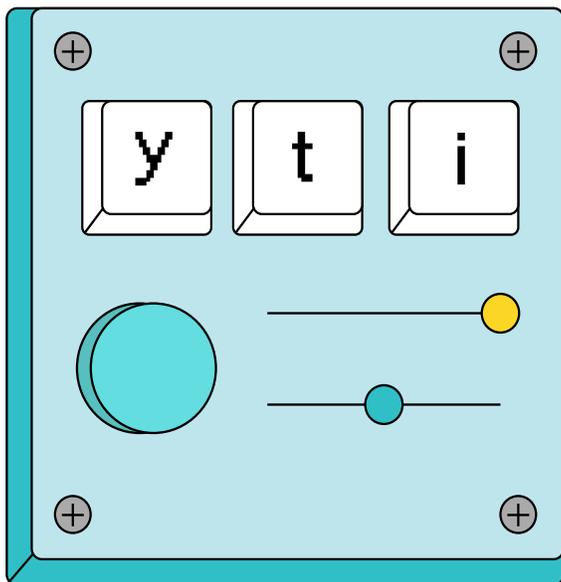

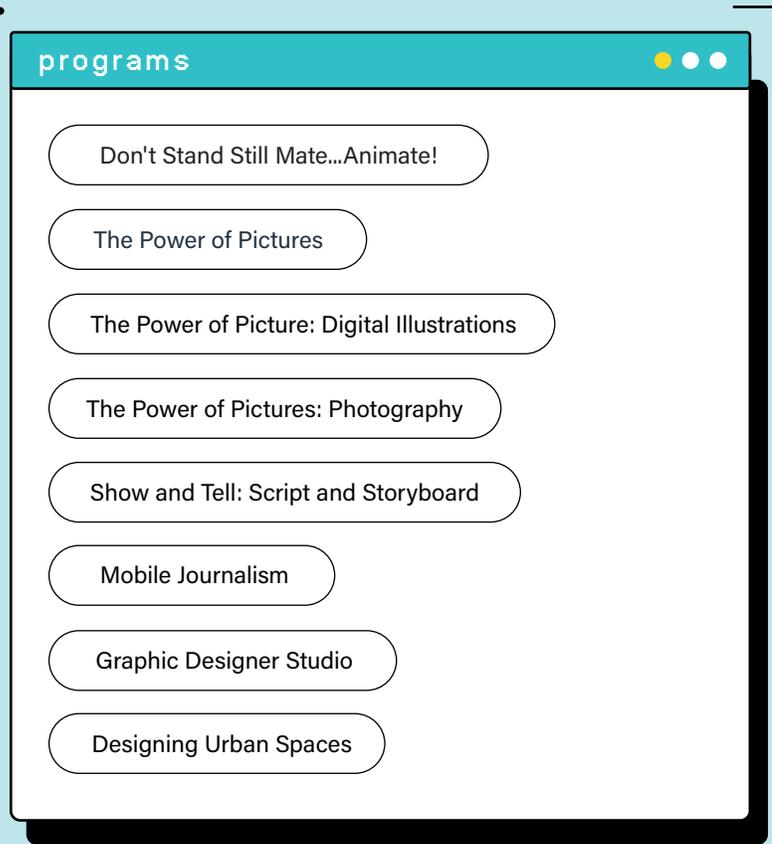

Digital Media Academy

Born on the campus of Stanford University in 1999 and given accreditation by Stanford University Continuing Studies in 2002, Digital Media Academy has been designing, developing, and delivering STEM education to students of all ages ever since.

From day one, they have set out to provide world-class tech education that sets students up for future success in learning and creating.

Digital Media Academy believes that the best learning happens while creating. They focus on cultivating the most important traits from students: creativity, empathy, and the ability to solve problems by immersing them in a high-energy, hands-on, collaborative learning experience.

De Colores C. Consulting

De Colores is run by three women of color, mothers, friends, community leaders and promotoras that have worked with and for the community for more than 20 years.

De Colores aims to inspire cooperativism, equity, passion, and professional growth to each person that they work with, always valuing their own skills, talents, expertise, and knowledge.

Through their professional consulting services, DCCC provides inclusive and organic learning that they inherited from our ancestors.

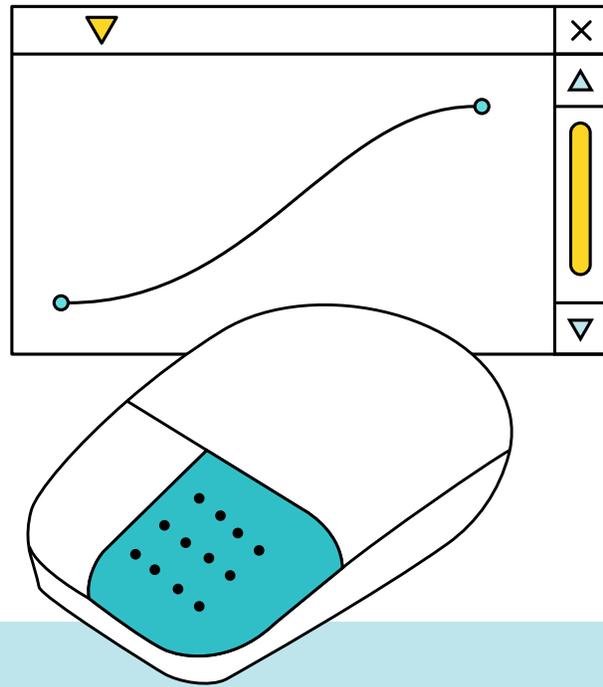

De Colores is committed to offer quality and professionalism in all our services. DCCC will be recruiting youth for workshops we're hosting; YTI will offer closed specialized workshops to the DCCC Youth Cohort.

City of Sunnyvale

The Columbia Neighborhood Center (CNC) provides recreational, health, educational and social service programs through a special collaboration between the City of Sunnyvale, the Sunnyvale Elementary School District, Advanced Micro Devices and numerous community agencies.

The center houses a gymnasium, fitness room, health and social services wing, and an on-site medical clinic.

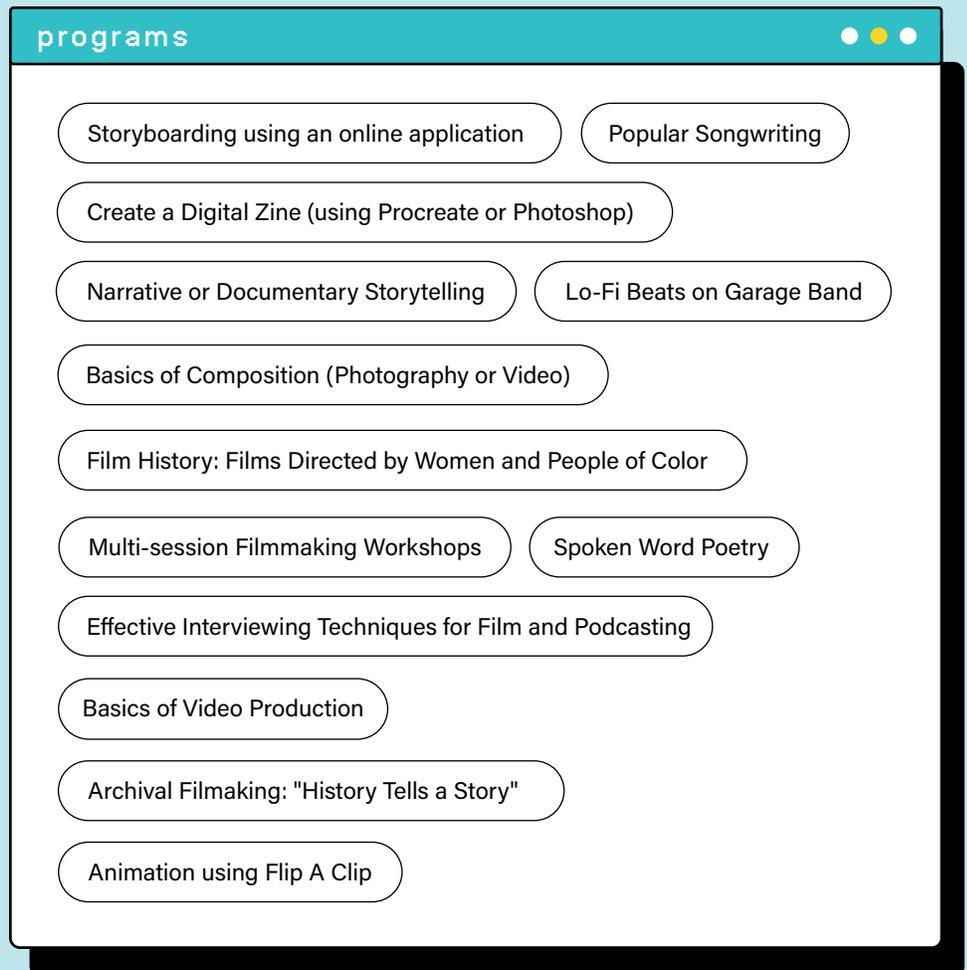

YTI will offer closed specialized workshops to the Columbia Neighborhood Center Youth Cohort.

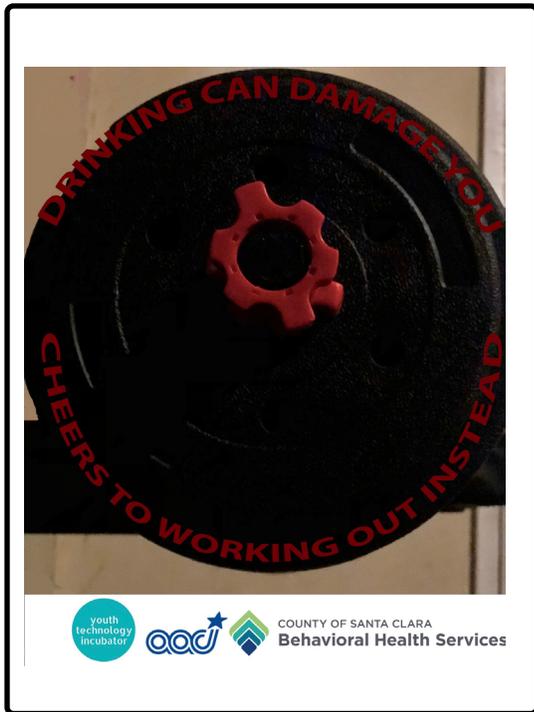

MACLA

The Teen Tech Center (TTC) at MACLA is a free arts education program in downtown San Jose, CA, dedicated to mentoring Silicon Valley youth (ages 12-19) in 21st-century skill development through multimedia production.

The highly selective, year-round program focuses on a range of disciplines, including professional video and sound production, visual and performing arts, and photography.

Substance Use Prevention & Education

YTI strives to promote health and wellness in our community by providing opportunities for youth to engage in activities that can serve as alternatives to substance use.

Fentanyl Takes Friends

In 2019, there were 71,000 drug overdose deaths in the US, most of which were from fentanyl or other synthetic opioids. Drug overdoses are now the leading cause of injury-related deaths - almost twice as many as people die from drug overdoses than are killed in car accidents.

Many drug dealers mix the much cheaper fentanyl into other drugs like heroin, cocaine, MDMA (ecstasy/molly), and methamphetamine to increase their profits.

Don't Take the Vape

Teens who smoke or vape could face higher risk of COVID-19 complications - including getting much sicker. Vaping can weaken lungs with toxic chemicals and fine metal particles - putting your body at a disadvantage for fighting infection. Being vape-free is a significant part of good lung health. Get help to quit vaping today and protect your lungs!
